Global Fund

FY14 Request: Provide $1.65 billion for the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria

Global Fund Funding History

Fiscal Year	FY10	FY11	FY12	FY13 House	FY13 Senate	FY14 RESULTS' Request
Funding Level	$1.05 billion	$1.05 billion	$1.3 billion	$1.3 billion	$1.65 billion	$1.65 billion

The Global Fund Saves Lives

- The Global Fund is a leading international partnership dedicated to fighting AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria around the world. Global Fund-supported programs for prevention, treatment, and care are estimated to save 3,600 lives per day – or over 1.3 million lives per year.
- The Global Fund is the main multilateral funder in global health. It effectively channels over 80 percent of the international financing provided to fight TB, half of malaria funding, and 20 percent of international financing against AIDS.
- The Global Fund has supported remarkable achievements in a few short years. Thanks to Global Fund financing, as of the end of 2012:
  - HIV/AIDS: 4.2 million people are receiving antiretroviral treatment.
  - Malaria: 310 million insecticide-treated bed nets have been distributed.
  - Tuberculosis: 9.7 million cases of infectious TB have been detected and treated.
- Recent advances in treatment and other effective prevention measures have allowed the global community to envision the “End of AIDS.” With adequate funding, the Global Fund could support the virtual elimination of pediatric AIDS, as well as the elimination of malaria as a public health threat in many countries and universal access to TB diagnosis and treatment.

- The extraordinary gains in AIDS, TB, and malaria are fragile. A reduction — or even stagnation — of funding could lead to reversals of recent progress.

A Model of Effective Foreign Assistance

- The Global Fund is on the leading edge of implementing the best practices and principles of effective aid, making it the most powerful tool we have to fight AIDS, TB, and malaria. Proposals are developed by the countries that implement them, they are evaluated by an independent review panel, and results are transparently reported on a public web site.
- Every Global Fund grant is audited. To further safeguard our investment, the Global Fund has an independent Inspector General (IG) to investigate allegations of waste, fraud, and abuse.
- To maximize the impact of our dollars on the diseases, the Global Fund has recently made changes in its funding model that ensures that the countries with the highest disease burden and least ability to use their resources are given priority.
- In November 2012, the Global Fund Board appointed a new Executive Director, Ambassador Mark Dybul. An immunologist by training with more than 25 years of experience in infectious disease, Ambassador Dybul was a key architect of the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), and directed the program as the US Global AIDS Coordinator from 2006 to 2009.

United States Funding is Key to Turning the Tide

- Historically, every $1 the US contributes to the Global Fund has been matched with $2 from other donors. United States leadership at the Global Fund crowds in other resources to fight these epidemics.
- This fall, donors will gather for the Global Fund replenishment meeting to make multi-year funding commitments. As the largest donor to the Global Fund, the US contribution will be a closely-watched signal on the overall size of the pledging conference.
- Because of the catalytic role of the US contribution to the Fund, the FY14 appropriation will in no small part determine the resources we have to fight these three diseases for the next three years, and set the trajectory for the next decade.
